The Mine Safety Critical Issues Conference is four days of power-packed experiences. Network with fellow safety professionals, hear from some of the top safety leaders in government and industry, and enjoy some of the best sun and sand Florida has to offer.

Check www.ISMSP.com often for updates on speakers, professional development courses and breakout sessions.

Duke Vector will address the CIC during its general session. The vice president of operations for Cleveland-Cliffs Inc.'s North American Iron Ore Company received the 2007 ISMSP Leadership Award.

“The word ‘I’ must be part of any conversation about safety, because that identifies who has control over safety.”

— Duke Vector

Mark Savit, partner, Patton Boggs, will speak during the general session.

“I come to the CIC because it is consistently the best place to exchange ideas regarding the latest approaches to mine safety. Both the speakers and the participants represent the best thinking on the issue of primary importance to all of us, how to improve the safety and health of our nation’s miners.”

— Mark Savit

Mike Brnich, CMSP, mining engineer, Mine Rescue & Emergency Response, NIOSH Pittsburgh.

“I’ve been attending the ISMSP Critical Issues Conference since 2003. The conference provides a great forum for sharing and learning new approaches to managing important mine safety and health issues.”

— Mike Brnich

Tom Vanderwalker, CMSP, leads a breakout session at the 2007 CIC.

Earl Doege, CMSP, loss control supervisor, Round Mountain Gold Corporation.

“From the opening conferences to the closing session, the CIC offers the safety professional a wealth of information from professional development courses to networking with others in the mining industry. This is a golden opportunity to help steer our way toward ZERO.”

— Earl Doege
